Citigroup – published 27 August 2020

Citigroup mistakenly wired $900 million to a group of lenders on behalf of make-up company Revlon. The bank had intended to make accrued interest payments while performing its duty as the agreed administrative agent for a loan the lenders had made to Revlon in 2016. Citigroup immediately attempted to recover the funds. But, as of 21 August 2020, Citigroup had filed lawsuits to reclaim $520.4 million, which was still outstanding.
